From the Dublin Nation. Under the Moon.

Under the moon as the twilight breeze Ripples the water in pulses of light, We stand on the bridge by the sycamore trees And list to the voice that comes through the night. Under the elm-row misty and dark, Love's sweet laughter rings from the bark-Sprinkled with many a dim red lamp,

Stretching away through the distance damp. Hark! mid the foliage blossom with June, Finkles a serenade under the moon. Under the moon in the village street, Gossipping crowds in the shadow meet Seated at dusky doorways there, Red-lipped maidens taste the air; Whispering now of their lovers' eyes, Blue as the beautiful summer skies; Whispering now of their flattering sweet. As summer fruitage dropped in the heat: Until they cadence a trembling tune— Soft as their pulses under the moon.

The wind walks over its precious floor. Courting the snow-bosomed sails, Daintily dipping through azure vales, Over the crisp toam bearing along The musing mariner's midnight song ; As by the rising helm with bands Lit in the compass lamp he stands, Thinking of those he left at noon, Away he is bearing under the moon. Under the moon, by the dusky road, Pace we on to the old abode; The listless splendor floating falls O'er its sycamored roof and walls.

Under the moon by the soft sea shore,

Peering into the casement nook, Piled with many a brown old book; Spirits are they whose pages teem With thoughtful ditty and pictured dream; Spirits amid whose silence soon Our own shall slumber under the moon. From the Alexandria Gazette The Death of a True Hero.

A TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF HUNTER WOODIS, LATE MAYOR OF NORFOLK. Oh! why this mournful wailing, Amid the city's gloom? Ye men with footsteps failing. Whom bear ye to the tomb

That never wept before, O'er him who, softly sleeping, Shall wake to earth no more Fell he on field of glory, Insensible to fear? And shall he live in story, A name to freemen dear?

For manly eyes are weeping,

Did thousands fall before him, When flashed his sword on high That thus ye now deplore him, With wild, funeral cry! 'Twas not 'mid sabres flashing, Or cannon thundering loud,

On ranks of foemen proud; 'Twas not 'neath banners waving O'er gallant hearts, though few. The battle's fury braving, That fell our hero true. But in the silent dwelling, Where pestilence and woe,

'Mid hostile equadrons dashing

With tenfold fury celling, Laid many vietim low; 'Mid weariness and watching, 'Mid desolation deep, The last sad accents catching, Where none were by to weep No crown of laurel moved him,

No music cheered him on, But deep affliction proved him, When every hope was gone; Amid the dead and dying, Unmoved, he knew no fear, But checked the orphan's sighing,

And dried the widow's tear. Then pause, and o'er him weeping, Your last fond tribute pay, While to the cold earth's keeping We give his lifeless clay; We lose him not forever, For his spirit lives above,

Where death can enter never, in the home of light and love. Who first eat the Oyster! Almost everybody eats the oyster now, but who eat the creature first, and thus introduced the fashion, is a problem to many. We have heard it said again and again, over the steaming "stew," that the otherwise we hereby authorize any person to kill said girl, first adventurer in that way was a brave man. It really looks so. A man may bravely face danger in battle, and a thousand ways beside, but others have faced dangers before, and, to a certain extent, he knows the nature of the perils he is incurring; but not so with the man who first eat the oyster. He was a brave man. It was an untried and a critical experiment. He knew not what the result would be

-whether death by poisoning or what not. He was, we repeat, a brave man! MAILING LETTERS IN THE MAIL CARS .- The practice of mailing letters in mail cars along the mail routes, instead of at post offices, has become so very prevalent that we have been requested to again call attention to the regulations of the Post Office Department in reference to this matter. Mailing letters in the mode now so commonly practised is wrong, inadmissible, and unsafe, and interferes with the legitimate duties of route agents. It was never contemplated by the laws or by the regulations of this department that the mail car should take the place of the post office, which is the proper place for the mailing as well as the delivery of mail matter; but, for the better accommodation of the public, "route agents have been permitted to receive and mail in the cars such letters, and such only, as could not with ordinary diligence have been placed in the post office before the closing of the mail." Route agents are, therefore, expected to put an end to this indiscriminate reception of letters in their cars in the manner now so frequently and improperly practiced, " by closing the opening in their respective cars through which letters are despoited, and by receiving and mailing such only as come clearly within the rule above

laid down." "It does not appear that we have gained much
